AFBI LIBRARY TRAINING SURVEY

July 2017

Thank you for your feedback via the recent AFBI Library training survey. Your input is very valuable and gives us a strong indication of the types of support and training that complement your work. From your feedback, the AFBI Library has identified the following as areas of development in the coming months:

ONLINE FAQS

The AFBI Library recognise that many AFBI staff work remotely and therefore require online support for the many resources available. As such, the Library will continue to develop online FAQs covering working offsite, using ResearchGate, journal impact factors, and choosing journals for publication.

TALKS IN THE LIBRARY

The AFBI Library recognise the importance of current awareness not just in research but also in academic publishing. To keep AFBI staff up-to-date, the Library will host talks across a range of areas, including data management, getting started in publishing, and more.

ONLINE TUTORIALS

In order to allow AFBI staff to access training remotely and at their own time and pace, the Library will develop online tutorials across a range of topics, including finding journal articles, Endnote and more.

Dont forget that training is available to all AFBI Library users via http://www.qub.ac.uk/sites/afbi/Librarytraining/
In addition, we can provide individual or small group training covering search strategies, using databases and Endnote. Please get in touch!
